US brokerage will also serve as Central Agent for Jetsetter, the yard's first model

Worth Avenue Yachts has been made an official sales representative for the new Dynamiq range of superyachts in the US. The company will also serve as the Central Agent for Jetsetter, the first Dynamiq D4 yacht under construction.

Monaco-based Dynamiq was launched in June 2015, when it unveiled the first renderings in its new Gran Turismo Transatlantic (GTT) range of grand touring superyachts.

The GTT series is available in three base models – a 38.6m (127ft) D4 base model and S4 sport version, and a 40m (132ft) D4 L limousine version. All models are built in aluminium and are customised via an online configurator that allows clients to select every aspect of design – from the exterior paint scheme to the interior finish.

The configurator also features full pricing and delivery dates for every element.

Connor Cogan at Worth Avenue Yachts' Palm Beach office in Florida will serve as Dynamiq's US representative, while Hein Velema, sales broker at Worth Avenue's Monaco office, will be Central Agent for Jetsetter.

Jetsetter's keel was laid in 2014 at NCA shipyard in Carrara, Italy, and is scheduled to be delivered in September 2016.

Established in 2011, Worth Avenue Yachts is a luxury yacht brokerage that specialises in yacht sales, yacht charters and new yacht construction.

Dynamiq says it chose Worth Avenue as its official sales rep due to its reputation for "selling clients' yachts of over 120ft in length almost three times faster than the market average".

Dynamiq will be making its first boat show appearance later this month when it exhibits alongside Worth Avenue Yachts at the Monaco Yacht Show.
