Straight up, you'll wanna get in quick. Because numbers are severely limited, a total of just seven being made available for public sale. The goods news is, it will only cost you thousands on gas instead of 10s of thousands courtesy of the fact it's hybrid. A colab with yacht builders Dynamiq of Monaco (where else?), the GTT 115-foot masterpiece could fit 23 911s on it - at least we think.

The exterior styling is said to replicate the 911, but that looks to be a bit of a stretch. Though with seven-foot ceiling on both decks, furniture made from 911S seat material, and marble and carbon fibre cabins to sleep 12 people (including six staff), we won't hold it against them. Better yet, it operates on two diesel engines producing almost 13000HP, with a top speed of 24pmh. And saves gas with two 20.8KW electric motors for that hybrid life.
